Preface

The Book of Remembrance is placed in the Alamance Battleground Visitor Center to serve two purposes. First, to provide information about the people who planned and organized the Alamance Battleground Memorial Trail. We are indebted to these groups because without them this project would not have been possible. Enclosed you will find the names of the Alamance Battleground Memorial Trail Steering Committee that directed the project to completion, as well as pages dedicated to the donors and volunteers who gave time and money to make the trail a reality. Thank you to all of these people for helping preserve this part of North Carolina's history for future generations.

The Alamance Battleground Memorial Trail officially opened on October 2, 2021 to honor those who participated in the War of Regulation between 1765 and 1771. At the head of the trail, a kiosk bares memorial nameplates for individuals who either supported the Regulation or enlisted in the North Carolina Militia expedition against the Regulators. The memorials on the kiosk are accompanied by this Book of Remembrance, to provide additional information about each person that is memorialized with a plaque. In this book you will find the name of a historical person, their affiliation between either Regulator or Militia, a paragraph about that person, and the names of the people who sponsored that memorial. In this book the names are in alphabetical order.

If you are interested in sponsoring a memorial on the trail and would like additional information please go to any of the following Facebook pages:

NATHAN ALDRIDGE

Regulator

Nathan Aldridge was a Regulator from a part of Orange County which later became Randolph County. He was born about 1739 (birth place unknown) and died in 1826 in Knox County, Tennessee. His father, William Aldridge, first appeared in North Carolina land records when he received a Grant in 1756 for land located on Mt. Pleasant Creek of Sandy Creek of Deep River, making him a neighbor of John and Thomas Allred, Semore York and Herman Husband. Nathan signed Regulator Petition No. 9 along with two of his brothers, Nicholas and James. Their sister, Sylvania, was married to Semore York. Nathan moved to Knox County, Tennessee in the late 1790's. Some of his descendants living in Alabama spell his surname Aldredge but it is not known why or when the name spelling changed.

JOHN ALLRED

Regulator

John Allred was a Regulator from Orange County which later became Randolph County. He was born about 1725 in Chester County, Pennsylvania. His grandfather Solomon Allred was born in England and his father Samuel Finley was born in Ireland. He lived in Prince George's County, Maryland and Frederick County, Virginia before arriving in North Carolina around 1745. Land records prove he lived on the mouth of Mount Pleasant Creek of Sandy Creek of Deep River near Herman Husband's mill. John was one of 19 men who petitioned Orange County Court for the release of fellow Regulator Thomas Wellborn on August 25, 1771. John died in 1792 leaving behind nine children. His grave has not been found.

THOMAS ALLRED

Regulator

Thomas Allred (c1725-1810) was a Regulator from a part of Orange County which later became Randolph County. He was born in Chester County, Pennsylvania. He lived with his nephew, John Allred. Thomas and John (who was also a Regulator), were among the very first settlers to arrive in central North Carolina in the mid-1740's. John's land records show that he and Thomas lived on the mouth of the Mount Pleasant Creek of Sandy Creek and Deep River, near the modern-day town of Franklinville. Thomas and John were very tight-knit, living together (or at least on the same land) until their deaths. During the American Revolution, Thomas received a pay voucher for selling goods to Patriots. Thomas married twice and with his first wife had 9 children. Most of his children and grandchildren left North Carolina after the American Revolution.

WILLIAM ALLRED, JR.

Regulator

William Allred, Jr. (c1740-1825) was a Regulator from a part of Orange County which later became Randolph County. He was born in Prince George's County Maryland where his father, William Allred, Sr., owned land along the Potomac River near Antietam National Battlefield. The family moved to North Carolina in the 1750's. Land records prove they settled on land located at the mouth of Bush Creek of Deep River in Randolph County near the modern-day towns of Cedar Falls and Franklinville. William Jr. and Sr. were both active Regulators; both signed Regulator Petition No. 9 in May 1768. Later, during the American Revolution, both received pay vouchers for providing provisions to Patriots and were mentioned in Loyalist Colonel David Fanning's journal. William Jr.'s first wife is unknown. His second wife was Elizabeth Diffie (died 1827) and they are buried side by side in the Billy Trogdon Cemetery.

WILLIAM ALLRED, SR.

Regulator

William Allred Sr. was a Regulator from part of Orange County that later became Randolph County. He was born c. 1715 in Chester County, Pennsylvania, son of Solomon Allred born in 1680 in Lancashire, England. William purchased 3 tracts of land along the Potomac River in Prince George's County, Maryland in 1746, sold that land in 1752 and moved to Orange County, NC. The land he lived on was "on Bush Creek of Deep River." He and his son, William Jr., signed Regulator Petition No. 9. He also appears in Orange County Court Records when he attempted to help Job Self recover property taken by the Sheriff and pay Self's taxes. Later, during the Revolutionary War, he received a Pay Voucher for selling beef to Patriots on January 12, 1781. The date of his death and burial place is unknown.

JAMES BILLINGSLEY

Regulator

James Billingsley was a Regulator from Orange County which later became Guilford County. He was known as a prominent exhorter in Sandy Creek Baptist Church. Many believed he was one of the Regulators that gathered in Hillsborough to break William Butler, Harmon Husband and others out of jail in 1768. He signed the address of the Regulators to William Tryon during July and August of 1768. After the Baptist Association Resolution in 1769, Billingsley departed from the Regulator movement. However, he did sign the petition for the pardon of Thomas Welborn of Sandy Creek and of John Pugh in 1771.

ISAAC BROOKS

Regulator

Isaac Brooks was a Regulator from along Tick Creek, a part of Orange County that later became Chatham County in 1771. He was married to Ruth Terrell. Brooks signed Regulator Petition No. 9 in May 1768. From 1771 to 1775 he served in the North Carolina Assembly as one of the first two representatives from Chatham County. According to DAR records, Brooks served as a Juror and Road Commissioner during the Revolutionary War. Because of his influence and surveying work, Highway 421 which runs through Randolph, Chatham and Lee Counties is named the Isaac Brooks Highway. Descendants of Isaac Brooks have held an annual reunion since 1888 and financed a historical marker in his honor in Chatham County.

JOHN BUTLER

Militia

John Butler was a lieutenant in the Orange County Militia during the 1771 campaign. His brother William Butler was one of the key leaders of the Regulators. John also served as Sheriff in Orange County in the late 1760s. He was a Brigadier General of the Hillsborough District Militia during the American Revolution. In that capacity, he fought in the battles of King's Mountain, Camden, Guilford Courthouse and Lindley's Mill. He was a delegate from Orange County to the fourth Provincial Congress. He would later serve in the General Assembly.

WILLIAM BUTLER

Regulator

William Butler was a Regulator from Orange County. He was born in Virginia in 1740. Butler became a leader in the War of Regulation. Arrested in 1768 for inciting riots, he was given a six month jail term and fined. He signed Regulator Petition Number 9 in 1768. Butler was a ring leader in mob action in 1768 and again in the Hillsborough Courthouse Riots in September 1770. He was declared an outlaw by Governor Tryon in June 1771 and exempted from pardon. Tryon stated he was “outlawed and liable to be shot.” A reward of 100 British Pounds or 1,000 acres of land was offered for his capture dead or alive. His brother, John Butler, who fought for the Militia at the Battle of Alamance, entered a plea on his behalf for a pardon. When this failed, he urged William to leave North Carolina. John Butler tried for several years to obtain a pardon for his brother, but never succeeded. William Butler died in 1790 in Edgefield County, South Carolina.

HARMON COX

Regulator

Harmon Cox was a Regulator from a part of Orange County which later became Randolph County. He signed the minutes of a Regulator Meeting in May 1768 and a letter after a meeting at his brother's mill. Harmon was a signer of Regulator Petition No. 9 in May 1768 and the Regulator Address to Governor Tryon in July/August 1768. After the Battle of Alamance, the Orange County militia detachment under Edmund Fanning was ordered to his home to retrieve supplies for the militia. It is presumed that Harmon Cox was sentenced to death on June 15, 1771 but was recommended to be pardoned.

Regulator

Rednap Howell was a Regulator from a part of Orange County which later became Randolph County. He was born in New Jersey and later moved to Orange County. A school teacher by trade, Rednap became a key leader of the War of Regulation. He was called the “Poet of the Regulation” because of poems and songs he wrote to inspire the Regulators. He and James Hunter hand-delivered Regulator Advertisement No. 9 to Governor Tryon in 1768. His signature appears on numerous minutes and documents from Regulator meetings. In 1771, while in Halifax, he wrote a letter to James Hunter about moving the Regulator movement to eastern counties. This letter was intercepted and used by the Governor as evidence of a rebellion and to begin organizing the march to Alamance. Rednap was declared an outlaw and never pardoned. He died in 1787 in New Jersey near where he was born.

PETER JULIAN, SR.

Regulator

Peter Julian, Sr. was a Regulator from Orange County. He signed Regulator Petition Number 9 in 1768. On September 29, 1768 the Superior Court in Hillsborough issued two indictments for a Peter Julian for rioting. No distinction was made but this could have been father and son. Later in 1768, he was one of three signers of a letter to Governor Tryon asking that a herd of cattle not be driven through Orange County because of a possible disease. The letter also assured the Governor that the Regulators were loyal to the King but needed relief from misdeeds by local officials. Julian was also present when the Rowan County Officials attempted to settle issues with the Regulators in March 1771.

Regulator

Robert Thompson was a Regulator from a part of Orange County that later became Guilford County. He was born around 1723, possibly in Lewes, Delaware. In 1750, he married Ann Ferguson in Amelia, Virginia. Robert received a land grant from Lord Granville in 1755. He spoke out against local officials especially Maurice Moore, a district judge, who he accused of showing partiality that made him lose a land case in court. Thompson stated that he was in possession of the land, stood in defiance, and would see who would take it from him. At the Battle of Alamance he was one of three men that went to Governor Tryon's camp to try to avert military action; however he was taken prisoner by Tryon. He was shot in view of the Regulators just prior to the start of the battle. Governor Tryon insisted that he was trying to escape.
